A detailed botanical illustration of a plant, possibly a species of Mimosa or a similar legume. The plant features a thick, gnarled, light-brown trunk that branches out into numerous upright, slender stems. These stems are densely covered with small, green, oval-shaped leaves. Interspersed among the leaves are clusters of small, yellowish-brown, cylindrical structures, which appear to be seed pods or fruit. The background is a light, textured surface, possibly a piece of paper or a wall, with some faint, darker greenish-blue patches. The overall style is that of a traditional botanical drawing, with fine lines and a focus on the plant's morphology.

A medieval manuscript illustration of a plant, likely a herb, with two large white flowers and a complex root system. The plant has green leaves and stems. The roots are depicted as a dense, branching network at the base. The illustration is surrounded by handwritten text in a medieval script.

This botanical illustration depicts a plant with a central stem and several large, green, heart-shaped leaves. At the top of the stem, there are several blue, star-shaped flowers. The roots are brown and fibrous. The illustration is surrounded by handwritten text in a medieval script, which appears to be a form of Old English or Old Norse. The text is written in a cursive style and is partially obscured by the plant's leaves and flowers.
